Crossroads for Youth Announces Two Additional Board Members for 2016

OXFORD, Mich., January 19, 2016 – Crossroads for Youth, a nonprofit that works with at-risk and disadvantaged youth and their families throughout Michigan, announced today the appointment of two new members to its Board of Directors. The additions bring the board's total to 16 members. Joining the board are:

- Susan Williams, project manager for Oakland County's Leadership Oakland, since 2012. Williams is responsible for managing the organization's website, planning and executing monthly Cornerstone program sessions, obtaining and maintaining relationships with sponsors and assisting with the planning of networking events throughout the year. Williams received a Bachelor of Science from Grand Valley State University. Williams resides in Rochester Hills, Michigan.

"I believe that with my own personal experiences, professional network and event planning/fund raising skills, I'll be able to support the Crossroads mission and continue to create success stories," said Williams.

- Tina Barton, clerk of the City of Rochester Hills, has been with the government since 2013. She is also a 2016 candidate for Oakland County Clerk. Barton received a Bachelor of Business Administration, and a Master of Arts in Management and Leadership from Liberty University. Barton is a resident of Davisburg, Michigan.

"My desire is to work in partnership with Crossroads to help shape and direct the lives of participants towards the completion of programs, with tools and resources that promote positive lifestyle and behavioral changes," said Barton.

Both board members start effective immediately.

"We are honored to add Susan and Tina to our Board of Directors," said Dr. Janet McPeck, Crossroads for Youth president. "They bring diversified experience that further strengthen our ability to operate, and offer at-risk youth a second chance at success."
